Subject: EOCCG Update 22: Planned Truck Demonstration

Good evening,

There were very few protesters remaining within the City today. A small group had congregated at Booth Street/Sir John A Macdonald Parkway this afternoon; however, they are now down to about 25 in number and are being moved along by Ottawa Police Service. The encampment at Coventry Road is now vacated and any debris remaining will be cleared out tomorrow. Ottawa Police Service are reporting: 191 arrests; 389 criminal charges laid; and at least 79 vehicles towed.

City staff supported Police overnight and all day today to clean up city streets. Roads and Parks crews are cleaning up debris and clearing snow from areas that they could previously not access. Solid Waste is filling garbage bins and then hauling them back to Trail Road (note: 8 large bins have been filled thus far!). Wastewater Services has been engaging to support the removal of human waste left on City streets.

As a result of the tremendous work accomplished this weekend, the perimeter/red zone downtown no longer exists. Instead, a new "exclusion zone" representing a fenced off area that encircles Parliament Hill has been put in place. The fencing goes from Bay to Elgin along Sparks Street and makes that area inaccessible to vehicles. Ottawa Police Service and the City are reaching out to implicated BIAs and to the Ottawa Coalition of Business Improvement Areas (OCOBIA) to discuss impacts specific to this fenced off area.

The five downtown LRT stations that had been closed since Friday will re-open tomorrow, ensuring a continuous route for O-Train Line 1. Transit Services will also be updating its bus routes, now that Ottawa city streets south of Queen, as well as the Mackenzie King Bridge, are accessible. City Hall will open on Tuesday and confirmation of additional service resumptions for other City services will be decided tomorrow.

Police checkpoints will remain, although the City is expecting their number to reduce. In the short-term though, this means that traffic in and around the downtown core will continue to be impacted. The EOC is working with partners to ensure that essential workers and hospital patients can access their workplaces or appointment locations. The Integrated Command Centre will continue to operate. It will be important for police agencies to work together to prevent protesters from attempting to return to Ottawa. The NCRCC, however, will likely de-mobilize this week or switch to a virtual/on-call model.

The City's EOC will continue to support Ottawa Police Service and will base its demobilization on Police support requirements, and threat assessment.
